Provo, Orem to vote on mass transit today

By MARK ALBRIGHT
Universe Staff Writer

Provo and Orem voters will go to the polls today to decide whether to levy additional quarter-cent sales tax to fund a mass transit system. Polls will open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. If the sales tax hike is approved, the Provo Transit Authority (TTA) will purchase enough buses to provide service within two blocks of 90 percent of the homes in Provo and Orem. The TTA is a seven-member board which was formed after voters approved a mass transit district last November. TTA chairman John Clarke said the tentative bus systems have been designed. Each system includes main lines which would serve BYU, downtown Provo, University Mall, central Orem and the LDS temple. Merrill Gappmayer, also a member of the TTA, said the tax hike would cost about $15 a year for a family of four earning $15,000. A family of two earning $10,000 would pay $10. Gappmayer explained that up to 80 percent of the original cost of equipment will be paid for by funds from the Department of Transportation. The money is available to pay for up to 50 percent of the operating costs until 1980. Gappmayer said if voters reject the hike, almost half of the $850,000 in federal money available now to the TTA will be given to other Utah counties.

"After the federal allocations end in 1980, the TTA could operate using only the fares and sales tax," he said.

Opposition to the tax hike has come mainly from the Utah Taxpayer's Association (UTA). Vice President Jack Olson said the tax hike would drive shoppers away from the Provo-Orem area. But Clarke felt few people would drive 20 miles out of their way to save 25 cents on a $100 suit. Olson said it was a fallacy to think the quarter-cent increase in the tax would not hurt.

"That will amount to $1.5 million a year and it has to come from somewhere — mostly out of the pockets of those taxpayers who can least afford to bear an increase in the sales tax."

Voters should contact the county clerk for information on their voting district. Voters must be registered in the county, however, before they may vote.

BYU housing is in District 35 and Wymont Terrace is in District 47, with both polls at Wasatch School, 1080 N. 1000 East, Provo.

Riviera and Pineview apartments are in District 66, with polls at Rock Canyon School, 2400 N. 650 East. The districts just south of campus will vote at Joaquin School, 550 N. 600 East.

End of drought seen as water rises

By DAVE HEYLEN
Universe Staff Writer

The drought which has plagued Utah County for the past years appears to be over, as officials predict last winter's precipitation will fill Deer Creek Reservoir.

According to Fred Barnes of the Bureau of Reclamation, if May 14 the Deer Creek Reservoir, Provo's main source of irrigation water, was at the 5,406.38 level. The reservoir is when the water level reaches 5,417 feet.

Although the Soil Conservation Service's original forecast predicted the reservoir "would not quite reach the top," it was confident it would be filled.

The Soil Conservation Service will survey the dam the week of June and give a forecast of its water level.

In Provo, this will mean there will not be a repeat of the rationing which took place last year. Although drinking water was not rationed, activities such as watering lawns and washing cars were restricted to certain days.

A great deal of education in water conservation was given to the residents in the area," Barnes said. "Students are taught in classes and there were many spots on the map encouraging people to make the water usage go easier."

According to Merrill Bingham, director of Provo City's Water and Waste Water division, Provo will receive the 100 percent allotment of Deer Creek water given to it each year.

"We take water out of the South Fork of the Provo River and replace it with storage water from Deer Creek," he said. "Last year we only received 99 percent of our allotment."

The water department is given 8,000 feet of Deer Creek water to replenish the water taken from the South Fork. "This is so the people who have water rights can get their supply," Bingham said.

With the dam reaching its peak, Barnes doesn't feel there will be any rationing of water. "Personally speaking, we probably will have no need for rationing this summer. There should be an ample water supply, depending on the weather."

Arlo Richardson, Utah State climatologist, predicts this summer the Wasatch Front will have a 50 percent chance of having a wet summer. Richardson's climatological outlook is based upon weather readings of the past 47 years.

"The northern mountains will have a 73 percent chance of having a wet summer," Richardson said, "while the Uintah basin has an 82 percent chance."

Richardson said that as of May 12, the state precipitation average was at 134 percent, while in the northern mountains, which fill most of Utah's streams, it was much lower at 114.

Protesters riot outside airport

NARITA, Japan (AP) — Airplanes took off and landed without incident at Tokyo's newly opened international airport today as opponents of the $1-billion facility burned automobile tires within sight of the runway, sending up billows of acrid smoke.

Thousands of protesters — environmentalists, farmers and political radicals — tried to force their way into the airport through a cordon of 13,000 riot police over the weekend in a last-ditch attempt to stop the opening. It had been postponed 11 times over the past seven years by protest demonstrations that led to bloody clashes with police.

But commercial flights began arriving Sunday without major hitches, and today flights started taking off with no trouble. The first departure of a passenger plane was a Japan Airlines flight to Saipan and Guam.

Refugees leave Zaire

KOLWEZI, Zaire (AP) — Belgian paratroopers boarded airplanes Monday and left this African city, as refugees who arrived in Brussels, Belgium, told stories of murder, rape and looting in the capital city.

Troops left Kolwezi in the hands of French and Zairean soldiers after a three and a half day evacuation of nearly 2,500 white civilians.

The last unit of the estimated 1,200 to 1,500 Belgian troops climbed into C-130 transport planes at mid-afternoon Monday, Maj. A. Couwenberg, commander of one Belgian battalion, said the troops had been ordered 130 miles north to the town of Kamina.

"We're going home," he said, and it appeared some would return to Belgium.

But in Brussels, Belgian Premier Leo Tindemans said one battalion of paratroopers would stay at Kamina "to guarantee the safety" of Belgians remaining in Zaire's southeastern province.

An estimated 800 troops of the French Foreign Legion remained. Their commanders have said their mission is to pacify the province. The Belgian troops there were only to evacuate civilians. Zairean troops began arriving in large numbers Sunday.

Survivors arriving by the plane load in Brussels said murder, rape and looting were the order of the day during the rebel siege of Kolwezi.

About 1,000 of the 2,500 whites trapped during the May 13-20 siege have arrived in Europe and more are being flown back as French and Belgian paratroopers mop up rebel resistance in Shaba Province.

"It was as if the hunting season had been opened in Kolwezi. The hunt was a hunt for the white man," a mining engineer among the survivors who arrived in Brussels said Sunday.

He said four of his neighbors went to their garden gates to find out what was going on in the pre-dawn hours of May 13 and were killed by bursts of rebel machine-gun fire.

Another survivor said the rebels "kept on firing useless volleys in all directions with no reason," and that ragged, armed boys were "looting and shooting those refusing to hand over their watches or money while rebels looked on or took part."

Jean-Marie Lallemand, a 31-year-old French survivor, said the rebels scared Frenchmen "on the forehead and cheeks with knives to discourage Zaireans from harboring them.

"I saw three Katangans rape a 10-year-old girl in the presence of her parents and three brothers. People were beaten before they were killed. It was horrible."

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass claimed France and Belgium — backed by the United States which provided transport planes to carry fuel and ammunition — were continuing an "armed invasion" of Zaire.

French officials say the rebels killed at least 170 whites in the siege that began May 13.

Many of the rebels are former Katangan policemen who were driven into Angola during a secessionist rebellion in the 1960s, and who mounted a two-month invasion of Shaba last spring from the Marxist-led nation where they reportedly are trained by Cubans.

Before leaving Kolwezi, Belgian troops made a final sweep through the white residential districts, calling out in Flemish for anyone hiding to come out. About a dozen Belgians did. They said they had feared to emerge when earlier calls came in French, the main European language of local blacks.

The European sections were lifeless Monday except for stray dogs nibbling at corpses, and occasional military patrols. About 400 legionnaires are posted in the city, with the rest engaged in mop-up operations in the surrounding bush.

Court removes Berkowitz

NEW YORK (AP) — David Berkowitz, the Son of Sam killer, was dragged from a Brooklyn courtroom today, kicking, biting and yelling as the boyfriend of one of his victims shouted obscenities at him. Members of the girl's family jumped to their feet and cursed the confessed murderer.

A judge postponed the sentencing for six murders until June 12 and ordered another psychiatric examination for Berkowitz, 24. After he was brought briefly into the courtroom in handcuffs, Berkowitz began chanting, "Stacy was a whore!" over and over again. Stacy Moskowitz was the last of Berkowitz's murder victims.

Berkowitz also shouted, "That's right! That's right! I'd kill her again."

As 10 guards wrestled the .44-caliber killer from the courtroom, Robert Violante, the Moskowitz girl's date, who was also shot by Berkowitz, stood up in the courtroom and began shouting obscenities at him. Members of the Moskowitz family jumped to their feet and screamed curses at the pudgy former postal worker.

The girl's mother then broke down crying, and Violante sobbed into his hands.

The victim's father, Jerry Moskowitz, cried, "No Justice!" after Justice Joseph Corso of Brooklyn announced the sentencing delay.

Later, Berkowitz was taken back to Kings County

Hospital, where he has been held since his arrest last August 10. He was sedated and placed under augmented guard.

Earlier, as guards tried to bring Berkowitz into the courtroom the first time about 10 a.m., he lunged toward a window and had to be subdued. In the struggle, he bit and kicked several of the guards and one of them was taken to a hospital, according to a police source.

The extent of the guard's injuries was not known.

Edward McCarthy, aide to Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola, said Berkowitz told court authorities he did not want to be sentenced — "at least not today."

Berkowitz faced prison terms totaling up to 175 years.

Three judges from three boroughs — Brooklyn, the Bronx and Queens — had planned to deliver sentence in the same courtroom, taking the bench one at a time. The procedure was to be similar to one they followed two weeks ago when Berkowitz admitted killing six people and wounding seven others during a 12-month shooting rampage.

Last year, Berkowitz offered to plead guilty but only if he was allowed to warn the world of the bloodthirsty demons that he said made him kill. Since then, Berkowitz says he has become a born-again Christian.

Ski resort plan to be presented

Wilderness Associates will present its plans to the Provo Planning Commission Wednesday for construction of a ski resort and cultural center along the Provo east bench and in the mountains east of Provo.

Norm Nielson, Wilderness Associates vice president, said the proposed ski resort will cost an estimated $100 million and will cover approximately 5,000 acres in the area east of Utah State Highway.

Sally Harding of the planning commission said Wilderness has requested a conditional use permit to operate a ski resort in an A-140 (agricultural) zone. They have also asked for a revised preliminary approval of the base site for the Heritage Mountain Ski development between 100 North and 800 North, east of 1400 East, she said.

The requests by Wilderness were especially placed on Wednesday's agenda so sufficient time could be allowed to hear both proponents and opponents of the proposal. The commission normally meets on the second Wednesday of each month.

Actual presentation of the request to the planning commission by Wilderness Associates has apparently been held in abeyance while they awaited the issuance of a conditional use permit by the U.S. Forest Service for those ski resort areas on public land, Nielson said.

So far there has been no public announcement regarding the issuance of the permit, but Nielson said he anticipated receiving it soon. If approved by the planning commission, the plans would then have to appear before the Provo City Commission on Thursday.

Nielson said if the plans are approved, construction on the rail system would begin within 60 days.

The planning commission meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the City Commission Chambers at City Center, and the public is welcome to voice opinions, Miss Harding said.

Preferential police-hiring OK'd by Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today left intact police-hiring practices in Rochester, N.Y., that give preference to applicants from racial minorities.

The justices refused to hear an appeal by 16 unsuccessful white applicants for police jobs who claimed the practices are a form of illegal racial discrimination.

The court's action today does not represent any ruling as to the merits of the city's police hiring policies.

The justices merely left standing a decision of the second U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that the 16 white applicants had no legal right to challenge the policies because they had waited too long to do so.

Still pending before the high court is the "reverse discrimination" case of Allan Bakke, an unsuccessful white applicant to a California medical school who claims he was the victim of unconstitutional race bias.

The court's decision in Bakke's case, expected sometime before July, could be its most important statement on race relations since it outlawed segregation in 1954. The future of hundreds of "affirmative action" programs could be affected by the Bakke ruling.

The Rochester controversy stems from a 1974 lawsuit filed against the city by a group of minority members who had unsuccessfully sought jobs.

In other action Monday, the court agreed to review lower court rulings the federal government says will impair seriously the way it pursues the nation's economic goals.

The justices said they will study decisions barring the Federal Open Market Committee of the Federal Reserve System from circumventing "prompt" disclosure provisions of the Freedom of Information Act.

Bookstore hasn't sold a single 'RN' copy

Like everyone else across the nation, BYU patrons apparently are not interested in the latest account of Richard M. Nixon's life.

Copies of the $19.95 book entitled "The Memoirs of Richard Nixon" are still sitting in the bookstore.

"He's trying to see how much money he can get. I won't buy it," said Delia Parrott, a junior in public relations from Salt Lake City. She is pictured above leafing through the book in the bookstore. According to a bookstore employee, none of the 25 copies ordered has been sold. The book has been available for about 10 days. Although it is being displayed in several areas throughout the bookstore, employees are finding people are no longer interested in reading about one of the nation's ex-presidents.

Reports indicate the book is also selling slowly throughout the nation.

Tear gas quells Africans

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police moved in with tear gas to quell rioting black workers who burned down several buildings at a gold mine south of Johannesburg, police and mine officials reported today. They said 14 men were injured in the disturbances.

A spokesman for the Anglo-American Corp., which operates the President Steyn mine, said the situation at the mine was "calm and under control." Police arrested 16 men Sunday night and were continuing to patrol the area.

300 protestors arrested

BANGOR, Wash. (AP) — Nearly 300 were arrested Monday after they climbed a 6-foot-tall barbed wire fence and gathered on a grassy knoll inside the Trident nuclear submarine base to protest international nuclear weaponry.

The demonstrators, holding a United Nations flag and singing "We Shall Overcome," said they were trying to draw attention to the U.N. General Assembly special session on nuclear disarmament. No charges were filed, pending an appearance before a federal magistrate.

China desires greater U.S. alliance

JACKSONVILLE, Ill. (AP) — China is eager to increase contacts with the United States, but there can be no normalization of relations until the United States severs diplomatic relations with Taiwan, the deputy chief of China's liaison office says.

Han Hsu, on the first public address by an official of the People's Republic to an American audience, said Sunday that "the Chinese people are determined to liberate Taiwan. When and how is entirely China's internal affair, an internal affair which brooks no foreign interference whatsoever."

West Germans urged to talk

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, distressed by West German's affection for television, is urging families to shut off the set one day a week and talk to each other.

"We don't talk to each other enough, neither married couples, nor parents with their children nor friends among themselves," he said in a newspaper interview. "We have become more and more speechless and that frightens me."

Women filling better jobs

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's better paying, higher-status jobs are slowly being filled by women, says the Conference Board, a non-profit business research group.

A study released Sunday by the organization showed that women — more than 40 percent of the labor force — made slow but steady progress toward management, professional and some craft jobs from 1970 to 1975. The study said that due to some stringent federal laws and regulations mandating non-discrimination in employment, the gains signal "the start of a major trend."

In Utah...

U of U keeps state money

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The University of Utah kept $3.5 million in interest earned on state funds it should have returned to the state treasurer, Utah Auditor Richard Jensen said Monday.

Almost immediately, Jensen began taking heat from education officials who said his comments were out of line and his views wrong.

Jensen, in an interview, said the university was violating the spirit, but not the letter, of the law. He said none of the state's other universities kept interest earned on state appropriations.

Man injured on hang glider

A 32-year-old Layton man was seriously injured Monday when his hang glider crashed into the mountainside at the Point of the Mountain.

Kenneth Strong of Layton, Utah, was reported in "serious but stable" condition by Dr. J. R. Martin at the American Fork Hospital.

"He is suffering from a fractured skull and a fractured wrist," Martin said. At press time Strong had not yet regained consciousness.

Escapee found, returned

An escaped felon was returned to Utah State Mental Hospital last Friday after having been extradited from Montana.

Berde Howard Beckstead, serving life imprisonment at the Utah State Hospital for child molestation, was returned after having escaped from the facility April 28. Provo Police Detective Glade Terry said Beckstead will probably not go to court for his escape because he is already serving a life sentence.

Beckstead was picked up by police in Montana after applying for a job in a nursing home, Terry said.

He also attended a meeting with the American Law Institute in Washington, D.C.

Ambassador to speak

Fortunately for the American people's perception of Finland, a broadcaster is a broadcaster is a broadcaster — even when he is an ambassador.

Mark "Evans" Austad, who has spent most of his life as a broadcaster, is the first U.S. ambassador to record his entire mission on film. Today at 10 a.m. in the Marriott Center, he will share this film and his perceptions of Finland at the formal assembly.

The film deals with everything from his swearing-in ceremony, to trips around Finland. These explore facets of Finnish life from ice fishing to a reindeer rodeo.

The film has been shown on Finnish television and was heralded for its accuracy.

"Through your efforts, Americans will have a realistic picture of our lives, and understanding between our countries will grow," Finnish natives said.

"Finland is a country largely undiscovered by Americans," Austad said. "And that is unfortunate because they are such a tremendous people."

The Finns live with a series of problems," he added. "For example, there are only four million of them and they live in a very precarious position between Sweden and Russia, who make life very uncomfortable for them. But even so, they love and enjoy life."

Austad also said that Finland has none of the hostile feelings toward the U.S. that so many countries have.

"They don't think we are perfect by any means. They know our faults, but they know their own as well, which makes them more understanding of ours."

Austad has been a close personal friend of five of the last seven presidents and was appointed ambassador to Finland by Gerald Ford.

While in Finland he received the White Rose and the Order of the Lion from the Finnish government and became the first American ambassador to receive knighthood. The fact that the language was such a challenge is the only thing he did not like about the time he spent in Finland.

Austad is a native of Ogden and started his broadcasting career at KSL. He spent 30 years as a broadcaster, lecturer and commentator in Washington, D.C., and is presently vice president of public affairs for Metromedia Inc. His interest in Scandinavia began when he served one mission to Norway for the LDS Church.

County zoning ordinances amended by commission

Two county zoning ordinances were amended Monday morning at the Utah County Commission meeting.

County Commissioner Karl R. Lyman explained that the amendment to the contiguous lot, or "split-lot" ordinance, was to clarify the law as to the right to get a permit to get a home. He said the law goes into effect June 6.

According to state law, an owner cannot divide his property into more than two parcels without filing a subdivision plan. But, Lyman pointed out, many owners have used loopholes to avoid the state requirement.

He used the hypothetical case of a farmer who owned 10 acres of land. The farmer sells nine acres of the 10 acres to one son, who in turn sells the other eight acres to the next son and on down the line. All this is done, Lyman said, without filing a subdivision plan, thus placing the burden on the county.

The amendment provides that the right to subdivide rests with the land and not the owner. In other words, the second owner who sells part of his unit of land will have to file a subdivision plan before dividing the third time.

The non-conforming lots of record owned by the county are the same rights that residential property owners enjoy. The property is "non-conforming" when a zoning ordinance is changed. If a person owns a lot and an ordinance is changed, he has the same right to build or develop his property on the basis of the former ordinance, Lyman said.

LDS temple ground breaking planned

Ground breaking ceremonies for the Seattle, Wash., LDS Temple are scheduled for Saturday.

The First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints announced that the dedicatory prayer will be offered at 1 p.m. by President Marion G. Romney, second counselor in the First Presidency.

Elder O. Leslie Stone, a member of the First Quorum of the Seventy and executive director for temples, and F. Arthur Kay, regional representative of the Twelve, will also address the gathering.

President Brent L. Nash of the Seattle (Wash.) North Stake will conduct the services. The invocation will be given by Howard L. Biddulph, president of the Victoria British Columbia Stake. James H. Bean, president of Oregon City (Ore.) Stake, will give the benediction.

The building, with reinforced concrete faced with white marble aggregate cast stone, will include 106,000 square feet of floor space on five levels, topped by a 184-foot tower and 15-foot bronze statue of the angel Moroni, an ancient American prophet-historian.

The Seattle Temple will serve approximately 200,000 church members who reside in Washington, Oregon, Alaska, northern Idaho and British Columbia.

The Seattle Temple is one of six that have been announced by church President Spencer W. Kimball. Fifteen temples are presently in operation worldwide, and one, the Logan Temple, is undergoing extensive renovation.

The temple will be built on a 23.5 acre wooded area located at 148th Avenue, S.E., and Southeast 28th Street in Bellevue, near Interstate 90 at the Eastgate Interchange.

Rapes rise in Spring, BYU Security says

Attempted assaults are more prevalent in good weather because of increased outdoor activity, according to Capt. Wesley Sherwood of BYU Security/Police.

Because Spring and Summer usually mean good weather, students, especially women, should be particularly careful this time of the year.

Most attempted assaults take place on the fringes of the campus and the Maester hill area, according to Capt. Sherwood, and the best prevention is not to walk alone in these areas, particularly at night.

It is much better to prevent something from happening than it is to try to deal with it once it does, said Tana Johnson, detective at BYU Security.

Mrs. Johnson said three major causes of sex offenses are unlocked doors, curtains which are left open at night, and women who walk or jog alone.

"Girls need to get in the habit of not being so darned independent," said Mrs. Johnson. She said people need to face the fact that problems exist in Provo.

Sex offenses

Mrs. Johnson suggested couples arrange library pools, where a number of students go and leave together when they need to be at the library at night. A coed can also ask her home teacher or a member of the branch to walk her home. Many women fail to report rapes and lower sex offenses such as indecent exposure or peeping, according to Mrs. Johnson. This puts security at a disadvantage because reported crimes help establish patterns.

"Without a pattern set it is hard to investigate and follow up," Mrs. Johnson said.

There is a 99 percent chance that the offender will be apprehended if the offense is reported within three minutes, said Mrs. Johnson. If a person waits as long as three hours to report, the chance of apprehending the offender decreases to almost zero.

In the case of lower sex offenses, one reason women fail to report them is they "are proud of the fact that they are not affected by it," said Mrs. Johnson. In other cases, they may be initially shocked but end up laughing it off with their friends.

Embarrassed and ashamed

In the majority of cases the woman doesn't report an offense because she is too embarrassed and too ashamed, said Mrs. Johnson, especially with the more serious offenses.

To help avoid situations conducive to possible assaults, fences have also been erected in certain areas on campus. As part of the same preventive program, additional lighting and emergency phones will be installed by some time this summer, Capt. Sherwood said.

In addition, BYU Security offers lectures on self defense. Campus groups who are interested in having this lecture should contact Chris Stewart at BYU Security, ext. 2751.

Carters angry at book Hugh 'scum of earth'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Billy Carter wasn't the only one who took cousin Hugh to task for his new book about the Carter family, Hugh Carter has admitted.

He said Thursday that when he ran into President Carter's mother, Miss Lillian, at an airport a few weeks ago, "She got really angry and said, 'You're the scum of the earth.'"

In fact, cousin Hugh said here on a tour to plug his book, the only Carter to thank him for an autographed copy of "Cousin Beedie and Cousin Hot" was the First Lady. He said Rosalynn Carter wrote him that she and the president were reading and enjoying the book.

In Arapahoe, Colo., on Wednesday, Billy Carter called Hugh a "few names," suggested he belongs in a mental hospital, and accused him of lying in the book, particularly about Miss Lillian.

The book cites "family gossip" that Miss Lillian told Rosalynn was not good enough to marry into the family and that she "hit the ceiling" when her son, Jimmy, announced their engagement.

"I deny I'm a liar, of course," the author said. "Everything in my book is true. You know, the truth hurts sometimes and maybe it's hurting Billy right now."

WAC picks amazing

The selection of All-WAC performers continues to astound the simple mind. The WAC's recently announced Northern Division All-Star team is another honey. The selection of Utah pitcher Jim Maynard and BYU's catcher Rick Scrivner seem a little tough to justify. After all, aren't conference all-star teams supposed to be able to play with the country's best?

If Maynard is "one of the Northern Division's best hurlers" after compiling a mark of 2-1, with an ERA of 7.75 to go along with a league-leading 21 walks, then the WAC Northern Division is hard up for pitching. He led the Northern Division in strikeouts with 46, but that hardly seems justification enough for an All-Star spot. He was second in the league in yielding runs.

And getting close to home is another great one. The selection of Scrivner behind the plate. Scrivner, may be a great guy, but he hit only .229 in WAC play with five RBIs. Wyoming's Ken Martinson, who was also a platoon catcher, like Scrivner hit .309 with 11 RBIs.

But the baseball All-Star team selections are just following in the footsteps of a predecessor, the All-WAC football team. This year's All-WAC football squad featured the likes of Dennis Sproul at quarterback, among others. Even Cougars Mekeli Jeremia and Mark Bernstein hardly merited the honor. Jeremia played hurt most of the year, and hardly seemed to earn the first team honor this year as much as teammate Gary Peterson. But political influence seems to be as important these days as your performance out on the field. After all, how you could justify the selection of BYU's Jeff Blane to the All-WAC football team just the year before?

One Cougar who won the first team honor wasn't so sure he deserved it. When questioned about his selection he simply responded, "I guess because I'm a senior they felt sorry for me and put me on the team."

Y linksters preparing

The BYU golf team is preparing for the NCAA finals by competing individually in various amateur tournaments across the nation. Jamie Edman finished third last week in the Provo Open and is gearing up for another Utah Tournament this week. Mike Brannan is somewhere in the Midwest; Bobby Clampett is also out of town playing in tournaments around the country. The Cougars will regroup in Eugene prior to the finals to compete for the national title early in June.

Ainge struggling

BYU sensation Danny Ainge is finding out that hitting International League pitching (Triple A ball) is a lot harder than hitting a jump shot against New Mexico.

Playing second base for the Syracuse Chiefs, Ainge began the season in a big way, going three for five in his debut, but since then he has gone steadily down hill. As of May 14 Ainge had dropped to .190 and was on an 0 for 13 skid. The story on Ainge is that he can't hit the breaking ball and so he's seeing plenty of them.

In the field Ainge has played well, according to Syracuse Herald-Journal Sports Editor Bob Snyder. Snyder, who is also the Chiefs' official scorer, says that Ainge is making big league plays at second with his aggressive style. "The kid just dives after everything," Snyder said. "He's extremely competitive. I would have loved to have seen him play basketball," Snyder added.

Y spikers third in national meet

By LISA JOHNSON
Universe Sports Writer

Exceptionally strong blocking sparked the BYU men's volleyball club to a third place finish at the National Open Championships in El Paso, Texas, this weekend.

BYU was edged by the defending champions from Southern California, sponsored by Chuck's Steak House, who placed first, and the Outrigger Volleyball Club from Honolulu, Hawaii.

The tournament consisted of 40 teams from all over the nation that qualified in their regions. Competition was divided into eight pools of five teams each for round robin play, with the top two teams from each pool qualifying for a 15-team double elimination tournament.

Elimination tournament

BYU unexpectedly won its pool, but in the elimination tournament drew Chuck's Steak House, the Number one seeded team, which had placed only second in its won pool. BYU lost, 12-10, 15-8, 15-9.

But the BYU players breezed through the rest of their games that day, downing the Multnomah Athletic Club from Oregon, 15-13, 16-14; and a Chicago team in two straight close games.

On the second day of finals play, BYU ripped, three straight matches, downing the Kiedlering Club from Columbus, 15-13, 15-12; the Los Angeles Patriots, seeded second in the tournament, 15-12, 15-11; and the Olympic Club of San Francisco, 15-3, 15-9.

"The final game of the day was against the Outrigger Canoe Club, and we were very confident, since we were playing good volleyball and they weren't," said BYU Coach Carl McGown. "But we lost the first game, 15-8, had a good lead in the second, but we weren't patient and gave away enough quick points to lose the game 16-14."

All-Americans

The BYU club boasts of five All-Americans chosen at the tournament. The rookie All-Americans, chosen for outstanding play in their first year at the championships, were Dalton Harding, a freshman from Taber, Alberta, and Steve Stere, a freshman from Salt Lake City.

Bryan Carpenter, a junior from San Diego, won first team All-American honors. This is his second year of volleyball for BYU following a two year mission for the LDS church in Argentina.

Darrell and David Richards, twins from Bakersfield, Calif., were named to the second All-American team. This is also their second year in club volleyball. They are juniors and have both served on missions for the LDS church, Dave in Thailand, and Darrell in Indonesia.

"It was really an accomplishment for our players to do so well," said Coach McGown. He noted that many of the players on the other teams had been playing for years, and several are former Olympians.

Giant improvements

"We made giant improvements over last year," Coach McGown said. "People that saw us last year and compared us to this year were flabbergasted. Last year at the finals we didn't even make it out of our pool."

Women netters sweep Western Regional meet

BYU's women's tennis team netted the Western Regional Tournament title for the second straight year this weekend. Cougars Karen Kennington, Tracy Tanner, Denise Nardi, and Barbara Barnes teamed up to defeat Arizona State, University of Washington, Denver University, Lamar (Texas), and host New Mexico State.

All-American Karen Kennington, a senior, freshman Tracy Tanner moved through their singles matches undefeated. Tanner then teamed with Nardi for a perfect 5-0 score in Number two doubles.

The format introduced this year was a round robin, with each team competing with every other team in both singles and doubles. After losing twice to ASU earlier this season, the Cougars won a sweet 4-2 victory over the Lady Sun Devils in this tournament.

The tournament wins did not come easy, however. Barbara Barnes, BYU's Number one doubles player and Number four singles player, fell off a horse and injured her right arm the day before the team left for New Mexico.

"Barb couldn't pull her arm from her body," said BYU coach Ann Valentine. "She had to serve underhand, she couldn't play net, she had to loby and to hit drop shots. But she played so well she drove her opponents crazy."

Barnes had to default both her singles and doubles matches on the first day, but after physical therapy she rallied to finish the tournament with a 4-1 record in both singles and doubles. "She used great strategy," Coach Valentine said.

The Cougar team will face dual meets with nationally ranked Trinity University, Texas-Austin, and Odessa College before competing in the USTA collegiate nationals in San Antonio, Texas, May 28-June 3.

It is the story of my entire mission — from the swearing in ceremony at the State Department in Washington; a look at the Embassy; a trip throughout the country; examining the culture; the problems... and the excitement of Finland — both summer and winter. It has such unique scenes as a reindeer rodeo and a visit to a deep copper mine; there's an examination of nuclear fall-out in Lapland; I thoroughly examine the ice-breaker phenomenon of Finland, showing and listening to an ice-breaker at work in 40 below temperatures.

ight Cougars selected o WAC baseball squad

seven of the eight Cougar regulars and pitcher Tom Morris were named to the 1978 All-WAC Nonem Division baseball team announced Friday.

Outfielders Cam Killebrew and Eric Thomas, both unanimous picks, led the entire BYU field, catcher Mike Scrivner and Moss on the team.

Centerfielder Thoms, who led the division in batting a .464 and runs with 27, also led for the lead in ten bases with nine. He hit four runs and drove in 13 runs batting .464.

Killebrew, the Cougars' designated first baseman, batted .394, hit four home runs and 22 RBIs in 44 games.

Utah outfielder Ben Graham (.369, 21) joined Thoms and Killebrew as unanimous selection in the division.

BYU first baseman Don Valgardson is named to the team as a designated first baseman.

Allowing Wyming's Greg Brock (.33, 8, 22) select at first base.

Valgardson led the division with 33 hits and 28 RBIs while batting .452 and hitting three round trippers during WAC play.

Second baseman Clyde Nelson (.397, six homers, 16 RBIs), who led the WAC with nine doubles, Shortstop Vance Law (.390, three homers, 24 RBIs) and third baseman Kim Nelson (.441, five home runs, 22 RBIs) will be joined on the all-WAC infield by Wyoming's Earle Lawson (.325, one homer, 11 RBIs) and Colorado State's Jim Bryan (.403, five homers, 16 RBIs).

Despite his relatively low hitting average of .229, with no home runs and five RBIs, Scrivner topped the voting for the backstop position.

Morris was undefeated in three decisions with a 3.00 ERA. In 30 1/3 innings, Morris struck out 23 and walked only seven.

Despite a 7.75 ERA and 21 bases on balls in 31 innings, Utah southpaw Jim Maynard was named alongside Morris. He led the WAC with 46 strikeouts.

Sports The Daily Universe Regional hopes gone as Y loses in Arizona

By ANTONE CLARK
Universe Sports Editor

Parting may be such sweet sorrow, but the BYU baseball team may be chafing at the departure of Arizona and Arizona State from the WAC to the Pacific 10 in years to come.

Especially after the Wildcats and Sun Devils shut down BYU's regional hopes this past weekend, ASU made it a clean sweep for the WAC title, besting the Cats 3-1 Wednesday and 6-4 Thursday, thus winning a berth in regional play. Then Arizona completely dimmed BYU's hopes of getting an at-large regional berth, defeating BYU 8-4 on Saturday night for second place in the WAC.

For the Cougars, it wasn't a matter of being outclassed as much as poor execution when they had both ASU and UA on the ropes.

Good performances were turned in by those who game weekend series the Cougars stranded base runners, missing big scoring opportunities.

For the three-game set the Cats led 30 men stranded on the base paths.

Never led
BYU never led in any of the three games. Arizona State scored in the opening inning in both WAC championship games and the Cougars could never completely recover. UA also scored in the early going and nearly put the Cougars away for good with four runs in first two innings off BYU starter Arde Hardy.

In Thursday's WAC

championship finale, ASU got two runs in the first inning with All-American Bob Horner delivering a big two-run double. BYU rallied in the third to close the gap to 3-1. Marc Thomas got the Cats on the board when he singled then stole second and eventually scored on Kim Nelson's double.

Arizona State countered with two more runs in the fourth and two more in the fifth to seemingly put the game on ice at 6-1 before BYU got moving.

BYU woke up offensively and scored once in the sixth and two in the seventh but had missed even bigger scoring chances. Cam Killebrew scored for the Cougars in the sixth when he singled, advanced to second on Stan Younger's sacrifice and Vance Law's ground rule double.

BYU had ASU on the ropes in the seventh. Tim Anderson reached first on an error and advanced to third on another error. Thomas walked and Killebrew drove in Anderson with a single. Clyde Nelson then walked, loading the bases and set the stage for BYU's final run of the game on a sacrifice fly by K. Nelson.

Bases loaded
Sun Devil reliever Casey Lindsay came in with the bases loaded and none out and gave up the fly ball to Nelson before he could get Don Valgardson and Stan Younger.

Greg Peterson, a walk-on from Provo, picked up his second loss against six wins while ASU's Ken Jones got the win.

Arizona opened Saturday's game as if they were going to blow BYU clear out of the ball park. The Wildcats got two runs in the opening stanza and two more in the second.

Thomas led off the game for BYU with a single and then was cut down as K. Nelson hit into a double play. BYU didn't pose another serious scoring threat until the fifth when they scored on a bases-loaded walk to Cam Killebrew to avoid a shutout.

BYU's three runs in the eighth served to make the score close at 8-4. K. Nelson opened the inning with a walk and Jeff Burton singled before Law unloaded a two-run double. Law scored on Anderson's single to close the Cats' scoring.

BYU finished the season with a 37-15 record, including the three Arizona trip losses. The 37 wins constitute a new BYU season high. BYU also won eight non-NCAA games against teams in Mexico and Waseda University from Japan.

BYU tracksters win Eugene meet honors

Last weekend, in a final tune-up before the NCAA Championship Meet to be held in Eugene, Ore., some of the members of the BYU track team competed in the Cal Relays in Modesto, Calif.

Good performances were turned in by those who competed, and one more member of the team qualified to go to the nationals.

Dave Stapleton cleared 7-1 in the high jump to place third. He also qualified to go to the NCAA Championships in June.

Teammates Kim Nielsen and Rob Olsen tied for fourth place with 7-0 jumps.

Swedish discus thrower Kent Gardenkrans threw the discus 202 feet to place fifth in a tough field of competitors.

Zenos Moreno placed third in the 800 meters with a time of 1:50.26. Distance runner Jay Woods ran a 4:01.92 for third place in the mile. In the steeplechase, Larry Lawrence ran 8:58, also placing third.

American record holder Henry Marsh went to the Tom Black Classic in Knoxville, Tenn. Marsh won the steeplechase in a field which included three former American record holders. His first place time was 8:31.7.

"It was hot and muggy. I was hoping to run faster," said Marsh about his time.

The Cougars will participate in the NCAA national meet in Eugene, June 1-3.

Soccercats finish last in tourney as Utah and Weber State surprise

By DAVID SCHNEIDER
Universe Sports Reporter

Upsets were the usual instead of the unusual last weekend as BYU's soccercats won one and fell victim twice.

The highlights, however, were sportsmanship, or lack of it, and questionable timing.

Instead of losing to pre-tourney favorite Utah State (the eventual champion), defeating Utah and trouncing traditional doormat Weber State, BYU defeated the Aggies and lost the other two games, good for a third place tie among four teams.

Friday evening against USU, Brig Ord brought the ball down the left wing 37 minutes into the first half and fed Dennis Boyle in front of the net. Boyle failed to get off a shot, but managed to return the ball to Ord, who gave the soccercats a 1-0 lead.

The BYU defense held up throughout the first half and 10 minutes into the second half, but suddenly things took a turn for the worse.

Kamran Jannasari evened the score 13 minutes into the second half with a goal from five yards out which keeper Ken Wagner had no chance to stop.

Ord headed in the game-winner at the 34-minute mark after a cross by Hernand Sainz. Sainz was fed the ball from a long cross by Daniel Pereyra.

It was 84 degrees on the sidelines Saturday morning, and much hotter on the Astroturf, but the hottest and worst controlled items on the field were the tempers of the Weber players.

It took only 19 minutes for the first BYU goal. After fullback Lance Black cleared the ball from deep in his own zone the Cougars gained a throw-in near the WSC goal line.

Sainz received the throw-in, dribbled past two Aggies, lost the ball, regained it, and scored.

Goalkeeper Steve Asay received a yellow card at 35 minutes after being called for handling the ball outside the penalty area. Dusara replaced Asay with Kip Billings.

Two minutes later, a Weber halfback began shoving Ord. The referee refused to eject the offender, only yellow-carding him.

It took only three minutes of second half play for Weber to knot the score at 1-1 as Dave Wigham headed in a Mazlomi Koorosh cross.

Nine minutes into the half Weber was awarded a direct kick just outside the penalty area.

Walls just don't open up, but BYU's did this time. As Koorosh's kick approached the wall, a player moved to the side and the ball deflected into the net off an upper arm.

Much of the remaining game time was spent in delaying tactics by Weber, carrying "injured" players off the field and looking at balls that went out of bounds.

After the game, a referee said time was halted during "deliberate delays," which occurred "a few times" during the game.

Dusara said he accounted for only 37 to 38 minutes of play. The coach approached the referees after the game, he says, and one responded that he "thought" 45 minutes were played, the other "thought" 40 minutes were played.

Dusara said his team generally controlled the midfield, but said a big problem was the failure of the wingers and the halfbacks to get the ball to Ord, whom he said was the best striker in the state.

The first half Saturday evening proved uneventful except for three brilliant saves by Asay, including one shot which dipped while coming into the wind.

Twenty-three minutes into the second half a penalty kick by a Ute hit the crossbar.

Two minutes later a corner kick by Strong was deflected by a Ute defender into his own goal.

Gary Constant scored after a cross by Mike Kazimiri at the 33 minute mark and seven minutes later Chico Parisi added another.

"We have the talent and skilled players," Dusara said. "We have been beating these teams 9-0, 10-0. 'Lately we haven't been getting the ball to our strikers," he said. Despite playing on a football field, very narrow for soccer, the BYU wingers spent a lot of time in the center of the field.

"We have to get away from these schools," Dusara said, regarding sportsmanship. "When we play them our standards and morals go down."

Casper reminisces on professional golf career

By LISA JOHNSON
Universe Sports Reporter

Billy Casper, Mormon King of the Green, has come a long way from the cow pastures of New Mexico where his career began.

Casper is at home in his luxurious cedar-shingle house on a Mapleton hillside. The interior is adorned with numerous trophies, plaques and photographs, commemorating his stunning golf career. In his casual manner, Casper reminisced about his profession, family, and religion.

Hall of Fame golfer Billy Casper says his golfing career began in a cow pasture.

The gospel, family, and golf are Casper's first priorities, in that order, and he has found a unique way of combining them. Out on the professional golf tour for five to six months a year, Casper makes the most of his time at home with his family. "I'm so involved with my kids I don't spend as much time practicing as I should," Casper confessed.

The Caspers have 11 children, five of them adopted. The oldest are Linda, 24, now married and residing in Cody, Wyo.; Billy, 21, who recently returned from the Calgary, Alberta mission; and Bobby, 17, soon to graduate from Springville High.

Next comes Byron, 10; the twins, Judi and Jeni, 10; Charlie, eight; David, five; Julie, four; Sarah, three; and Tommy, 18 months.

Life changed

The introduction of the Mormon Church into his life greatly affected it. "I found that not only my game, but all phases of my life changed, and my children's lives too," Casper said. He and his wife were baptized on Jan. 1, 1966, when their family consisted of only three children. His career was successful before, but he said it has improved since.

He started playing golf at the age of four-and-a-half on his grandfather's farm near Silver City, Casper said. "My father was interested in golf, so he and my uncle constructed a three hole course in the cow pasture."

His game really got a big boost when the family moved to San Diego, Calif. He played golf all the way through junior high and high school as a member of the Junior Golf Program, but a conflict arose in high school.

Torn between golf and baseball, Casper was forced to make a decision. "In both sports you swing something, but they're not quite the same," he said. A career in professional baseball was a serious consideration. He lettered in golf for three years, baseball for two, and eventually opted for golf.

After high school graduation, Casper went to the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind., for a semester, but returned to California because the rain and snow of Indiana were not exactly favorable golfing conditions.

Casper then enlisted in the U.S. Navy. "I was in the Navy at a time when they had a tremendous athletics program," Casper said. He was connected with golf all the way through, working at a golf course and building a driving range.

Turned pro

He turned pro in 1954 while still in the Navy. Dan Collett, a chief petty officer, arranged for his professional sponsorship. Casper was out of the Navy and into the world of professional athletics by 1955.

"Your first win is always one of the most important," Casper said, and his first tourney win came 15 months after he joined the tour, in Quebec, Canada. He has been collecting wins ever since.

Two other major wins for Casper were the U.S. open in 1959, which had been one of his major goals since he began, and the 1970 U.S. Master's. He has devoted an entire room to memorabilia from the latter tournament, and foremost in that room is a portrait of Casper sporting the symbolic green jacket.

When he was invited to play in the Utah Open, he became acquainted with Hack Miller, and the LDS church. "My wife and I took the lessons in 1965, and were baptized the first of the following year," Casper said.

"I had found through experience that alcohol and tobacco were not good for a professional athlete," Casper said. "It was easy to accept the Word of Wisdom. It's no problem to go to parties and receptions with just a glass of 7-Up."

"Being a seventy, I'm always looking for opportunities to share the gospel. But most of the fellows on the tour are so wrapped up in the game they really don't have time to think or talk about religion. There are a few though..." Casper added.

Desire, determination, dedication, discipline, and devotion are Casper's keys to success, not only in golf, but in all aspects of life. He said those things are essential to the young golfer starting out, and added, "You have to be fortunate to excel in any sport today. The competition is so much greater."

To Casper, the hardest part of the professional tour is the travel. He said it's difficult to adjust to a different city and a different course every week. He also mentioned that for the past year-and-a-half he's been having problems with his concentration.

"I plan to play for another five to eight years of tournament golf," Casper said, and then there's the new Legends Tournament for players over 50. "There's a possibility of a senior circuit being established. A lot of guys that have made great contributions to golf are interested. Golf is probably the sport in which an individual can participate for the longest time."

Being with his family is Casper's favorite pastime, but he is also involved in agriculture, owning orchards; and golf course architecture. Casper has designed courses, some in the Rocky Mountain area.

And the crowning point of Casper's career may have been his recent induction to the Go Hall of Fame, one say more?

Two films produced at BYU received international recognitions at the U.S. Industrial Film Festival in Chicago.

"The Mailbox," a film about an elderly woman who makes daily trips to her mailbox in hope of receiving letters from her children, received a first place Golden Camera Award in the category of "Religion, Ethics and Brotherhood."

"The Phone Call," received second place Silver Screen Award in the category of "Education-non-scholastic." It is a movie about a teenager who tries to gain enough courage to call the girl of his dreams. Both films dealt with interpersonal communications.

Pillow concert termed 'excellent'

Who is Richie Lecea? Those who don't know missed an excellent pillow concert Thursday night.

In a pre-concert interview, Lecea said the most important thing about his shows is to have people walk away saying they had a good time. The pillow concert, sponsored by the Social Office, got just that kind of response from his meager audience of 150 people.

Strolling casually on stage without an introduction, Lecea put the audience at ease right from the beginning. His informal manner made the audience sit back and enjoy.

Lecea is a one man show, using only an acoustic guitar, several electrical sound gadgets that he humorously demonstrated, and the heels of his leather boots for percussion.

Lecea said his main talent is as an entertainer rather than as a singer or guitar player, and many people would be inclined to agree. He speeded up his act with jokes, impromptu shadow figures, and even a convincing Spinners imitation. So what if much of his music sounded the same? The audience was having a good old time.

"They might not have me back, but I'm here now," Lecea joked as he went into a comical '80s song entitled "Let's Get Drunk and Truck."

Richie Lecea performed Thursday night to an enthusiastic audience in the ELWC Ballroom. His easy rocking manner was interspersed with hand-clapping get-down music and imitations of buses, acoustic guitars and the Spinners.

which included an animated "trucking" demonstration.

Lecea ended his concert on the same informal note he began it. "If any of you want to rap," he said, "Come on up to the stage and see me. We're all friends, right?"

"I really like playing for BYU," Lecea said.

"I've played a lot for audiences that don't pay much attention. Then I just play to amuse myself."

However, he's also played for some very attentive audiences, being the lead act for the recent California jam, and touring with one of his favorite groups, Pablo Cruise.

"I plan to continue in music until I stop enjoying myself," Lecea said.

From the air of his concert, that won't be for a long time.

CBers vary from hams to hobbyists

By DARYL GIBSON
Universe Managing Editor

"Breaker one-nine."

The phrase calls to mind visions of hard-nosed truckers edging their rigs across the United States or it makes one envision a speeding motorist trying to outwit the radar of the Highway Patrol.

One also may envision a welfare worker who uses it to relay emergency messages or a man who uses his CB radio in place of a telephone for communication with his home.

Fast growing hobby

However both of these situations exist within the Provo-Orem area.

Citizens Band Radio in the years since the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) took the wavelength away from the "hams" and turned it into a free-for-the-asking hobby for millions has enjoyed a giant upsurge in growth, until today, when over 14 million Americans are licensed by the FCC to own and operate a CB radio. About 30 million are actually in use, some reports claim.

In fact, after the truckers made the word "Smookey" mean more than a bear that stomps out forest fires, radio prices went down from $250 to $49.95, listening went up, and the FCC opened up 17 more frequencies to the hungry "CBers."

CB communication

Although Amateur Radio "hams" talk daily to people from across the world, CB radio is good only for short range communication. In fact, FCC regulations make it illegal to talk with someone more than 150 miles away.

But only a few blocks away from the BYU campus, "The Key Peddler," alias Jim Burrell sits behind a key-making machine and monitors a CB radio. The reasons behind Burrell's "handle," or CB name, become obvious when one finds out that he operates a key shop located downtown in Sears' parking lot.

Since Burrell has no telephone communication coming into the shop, he installed a large CB "base" antenna on top of the small building, and talks with his wife and family over the radio.

Jim Burrell, who uses the call name "The Key Peddler," talks to his wife "Key Lady" on his CB unit from his key shop located in the Sears' parking lot.

"It's a lot easier than a telephone," Burrell says, as he motions to his small radio bolted to a shelf.

Passes the time

"I've been eight or nine years in this," Burrell comments. "Back then, there were only four or five people in your whole neighborhood," he says.

From the time Burrell checks into his shop in the morning until the time he takes the radio home with him at night, the radio stays on, monitoring Channel Three.

Burrell comments that he uses the radio a lot to pass the time of day while isolated in his key booth, as well as limited business use.

For instance, one CBer brought a lock into the shop to get fixed. After learning that Burrell had no phone but monitored a CB, the customer says he would call on the radio to find out when it was ready.

Aids motorists

One of the most useful purposes for the radio is when traveling. He says several years ago he was caught in the middle of a big snowstorm in Utah, while traveling from former home San Diego to Idaho. Burrell and another car in his party switched to the nationwide transportation channel, Channel 19, and kept in touch, while aiding other motorists.

"I won't go on a trip without them," he says. "I think that was the most rewarding trip I've ever taken with the CB, because I helped so many people."

Burrell also helps others install their radios, and monitors emergency frequencies at times.

CB 'slanguage'

Each channel of the 40 has its own little group of people that use it as their "home" channel, Burrell explains.

For instance, he monitors Channel Three most of the time, along with "Pink Kitten," "Gray Fox" and "Orphan."

Another CBer, Roger "Jolly Roger" Merrill of Orem, uses his CB primarily when out in the wilderness, or when traveling to meetings.

"I do a lot of nature photography for a hobby and when I'm out there in my four wheel drive, it's sort of handy to have," Merrill says.

Merrill recently won the "Master Modulator" award for the U.S., in a contest sponsored by a CB radio maker. Flown back to New York to compete as Utah's state winner, Merrill had to submit to judging, including reporting, in CB "slanguage," King Kong's climbing of the Empire State Building.

Emergency calls

Merrill won a Datsun 280 Z for his stunt, as well as a ten-day trip to London. But the trip and car are both being exchanged for other things.

Merrill is a Welfare Coordinator for the LDS Church in Orem, and also uses his radio when traveling to meetings during the week, logging about 200 miles a week.

The radio comes in handy, especially for traffic reports. "It's better than KSL Air Alert," he comments.

Except for occasionally getting traffic and weather reports or listening to the truckers talk on Channel 19, his radio stays most often on Channel Nine, the nationwide emergency channel.

Sometimes, he is able to respond to an emergency call or relay emergency traffic, he says.

Both find the radio useful for making friends.

Tax structure investigated; food tax repeal proposed

By RIC JENSEN
Universe Staff Writer

A blue-ribbon committee appointed by Utah Gov. Scott Matheson is investigating the state tax structure.

The committee will make recommendations to the state legislature in January 1979, on possible tax reform.

One of many proposals under suggestion is the repeal of the sales tax on food. Sen. Karl N. Snow, R-Provo, and a BYU professor, feels Provo's tax base could be seriously affected by repeal of the food tax. A proponent of the repeal, Sen. Frances Farley, D-Salt Lake City, however, says it is regressive and should be repealed.

Under the current Utah tax structure, the state of Utah collects a four percent sales tax on the sale of food items. Local governments collect three-quarters of one percent, producing local revenue. Counties with mass transit can increase the tax by one-quarter of one percent to fund mass transit operations.

Snow said repeal of the food tax could cost the state $58 million through the loss of state and local food tax revenue. He also said the proposed repeal could be damaging to Provo, which is in a unique position, being dependent on sales tax revenues from grocery and auto sales. By eliminating the sales tax on food, Provo would lose one of its main sources of tax revenue, Snow said.

"This tax loss would have to be made up by increasing property taxes," he said, "or by eliminating services the taxes provide." He said vital community services such as police and fire protection could be affected.

Sales tax revenue amounted to more than $1.8 million in Provo last year.

Food tax regressive

Farley said the food tax was regressive and made low-income workers pay a larger proportion of their earnings toward buying food and other necessities.

Error corrected

Tuesday the Universe mistakenly ran a picture of the Army ROTC's leadership lab with a story on the Air Force ROTC's Third Lieutenant Program. The Universe regrets this error.

Snow said he was not in support of the repeal of the sales tax on food, but he would rather see a tax rebated at aiding those with low income. He added this would directly affect those who need help and cost the state only about $8 million a year.

"Another solution to the problem," Snow said, "would be to distribute sales tax revenues to local governments and not have them retained at the point of collection as specified in Utah's constitution."

Snow said this would eliminate Provo's potential tax revenue altogether. He added he has amended this law, but his attempt was unsuccessful.

Senator wants repeal

Sen. Farley is a proponent of tax repeal, but only at the state level. "Families with many children on fixed incomes are hit by the food tax," Sen. Farley said she felt the tax was regressive and should be assigned according to pay.

Sen. Farley said she felt revenues lost by taking away tax on food could be made up in other areas, and feels many proposals are worth considering. "A progressive income tax, a higher tax scale beginning with a tax on cigarettes and alcohol, and higher taxes on minerals dug within the state, and higher taxes on business," she said.

"We can make a change for the better in tax reform and should do so, adding that she felt such changes were being used by those who were to retain the status quo, making reform difficult."

Sen. Farley also said the general tax commission was so weighted with business and industry leaders, that she felt pessimistic tax reform measures coming from the committee.

"The only real hope for tax reform will come from within," she said.

Award given Y professor

A former BYU communications professor has been awarded a special citation by the University of Utah. Dr. Oliver R. Smith was awarded for his more than 40 years of service in the field of journalism education. Smith retired from teaching last month.

"There's no question Smith is one of Utah's foremost pioneers in journalism education," said Dr. M. Dallas Burnett, chairman of the BYU communications department.

"For a man to be in this field for 40 years, you know he must have done some remarkable things," Burnett said.

The citation by the University of Utah is Smith's second in many months. Last month he was awarded the "Meritorious Service Award" by the BYU communications department.

According to the citation, Smith began his journalism career more than 40 years ago at the University of Utah where he served on the staff of the "Utah Chronicle" as an undergraduate student.

He accepted a teaching position at BYU in 1938 and later served as chairman of the BYU department of journalism and communications for 17 years.

In 1953 Smith and Quintus C. Wilson, chairman of Utah's department of journalism at that time, initiated the Sigma Delta Chi charter for the Utah headlines.

One-of-a-kind machine moves trees to Y campus

12 inches in diameter. So far, more than 230 large trees have been moved to the campus, he said.

In addition to making possible the purchase and relocation of large trees, the spade is a valuable conservation tool. Local residents may donate trees which have grown too large or would otherwise need to be cut down, Peterman said. BYU has received about 100 gifts of this type, and the spade has more than paid for itself as a result of such donations, Peterman said.

The spade digs a cone shaped clump of earth around the roots of the tree 48 inches deep. This keeps the "ball" or clump of dirt and roots surrounding the tree from being destroyed. Of the 230 trees moved by the spade, only one has been lost.

By use of hydraulic levers, the tree is placed in a hole dug by the machine. The spade then folds away from the tree, leaving it replanted. Chemicals are sprayed on the tree to help it retain moisture.

The tree spade was partially funded by California businessman Jack Wheatley, who has donated many trees and shrubs to BYU, Peterman said.

More than 230 large trees have been planted on campus with this newly purchased truck-mounted spade.

A truck-mounted spade used for moving large trees has been purchased by BYU, according to Grounds Supervisor Roy Peterman. The spade makes possible the relocation of trees to the campus that would otherwise be destroyed, Peterman said.

The spade is the only one of its kind in Utah, and can move trees up to

Stamp increase approved; first-class rates rise in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service approved a 2-cent increase in first-class mailing rates Friday, refusing to consider further the Carter administration's plea to retain present rates for individual citizens.

Effective May 29, the cost of mailing first-class letter will jump from 13 cents to 15 cents for all Americans.

The U.S. Postal Service's board of governors adopted the new rates by unanimous vote after voting 4-2 against making a final attempt to have a citizens' rate lower than the charge for business letters.

Under the citizens' rate proposal, the cost of a stamp would have been set at 13 cents for individuals while rising to 16 cents for businesses.

Under government rate-setting procedures, the Postal Service recommends rate changes to the Postal Rate Commission, an independent agency. The commission acts, the proposed rates are forwarded to the board of governors for final approval. A three-member committee of the board apparently has recommended unanimously Thursday night that the 15-cent rate be approved, but only under protest. However, Friday's vote on that same issue was 4-2. That action would have forced a reconsideration by the Postal Rate Commission of its rejection of the special citizens' rate last week.

Board Chairman M.A. Wright said Friday he had not voted with the two other members of the board committee on Thursday night. In addition, board member Hayes Robertson changed his vote Friday.

All three board members present Thursday night had said they wanted to force the rate commission to reconsider its rejection of the citizens' rate, which President Carter had advocated. And officials present at Thursday night's meeting said they considered it a 3-0 vote.

However, after the closed session Friday, the previous vote was announced as 2-1, with Wright casting a dissenting vote.

When Robertson changed his vote to oppose reconsideration, that sealed the fate of the citizens' rate proposal.

Wheelchair barriers checked in Provo

By JANICE HIRST
Universe Staff Writer

A gathering of people at the Kress building on Provo's Center Street Friday morning drew more than the usual attention from passers-by. The corner was crowded with people in wheelchairs.

Handicapped persons and community leaders teamed to survey Provo City's business district for barriers to wheelchairs. The event, part of Utah's Handicap Awareness Week, was organized by Lana Brown, a member of the board of Handicap Awareness, Inc.

Wheelchair athlete Curt Brinkman was there at 9 a.m. to see the group begin their tour around the city blocks before he began the last part of his 275-mile trek from Cedar City to Salt Lake City to earn money for Easter Seals.

Each of the 13 wheelchair teams was assigned two city blocks to check sidewalks, crosswalks, water fountains and telephone booths within the area from 500 West to 200 East and from 300 South to 500 North along University Avenue.

Inaccessible buildings

Long before the evaluation, handicapped citizens in the area complained to Handicap Awareness, Inc. about inaccessible buildings.

"The doors are so heavy in many stores that it's really a chore to push them open," said Mrs. Merle Thurnau. Others pointed out that most people ignore or abuse facilities especially designed for the handicapped. Mrs. Burton Walker said many handicapped parking signs have been knocked down at University Mall.

"Provo City asked us to do the evaluation; we didn't ask them," Miss Brown said. "The city intends to use the neighborhood community development fund to improve sidewalks and streets for the handicapped citizens."

Government officials

Participants in the wheelchair survey included Provo Mayor James E. Ferguson and City Commissioners Anagene Meehan and J. Earl Wignall; State Senator Ernest Dean; and Utah County Commissioners Karl R. Lyman, Kenneth Pinegar and Yulus Inouye.

The wheelchair evaluation was not a new experience for Inouye, a member of the State Board of Handicap Awareness for three years.

"I participated in the Salt Lake Handicap Awareness activity two years ago, but I'm still learning," he said. "This event is for the citizen's awareness. We can't make them change their facilities, but we can make them aware of the needs of the handicapped."

Eye-opener

The wheelchair excursion also proved to be an eye-opener for leaders and volunteers who never had the experience before.

"These people will see for themselves how difficult it is," said Elsie Harris, county ombudsman.

Going across University Avenue proved to be traumatic for those in wheelchairs for the first time. As one group pulled up the slope to the middle of the street, they saw three lanes of cars make a sudden halt in the middle of the intersection, just in time. A truck parked along the road near a construction site created a blind spot for a wheelchair group taking a detour.

Brinkman's first wheelchair feat

"Can traffic see someone in a wheelchair?" someone asked.

"Are you kidding?" answered Robert Walsh, a member of the Handicap Awareness board. "When Curt Brinkman did his first wheelchair feat from Idaho Falls to Yellowstone, the Forest Service told him to give it up because he was liable to get run over by fast cars on the mountain roads."

Curt Brinkman, right, watches as Provo City Mayor James E. Ferguson maneuvers his wheelchair to get drink of water. Brinkman participated in the Provo event on his way to Salt Lake City where he broke a world's record and raised $11,601 for the Easter Seals Society.

One husband-and-wife team, Burt and Judy Walker, took turns in a chair. Walker, a pre-med student at BYU, took a trial run with his wife's wheelchair, and nearly fell over backward challenging a five-inch curb cut on a sidewalk at St. Mary's Episcopal Church. Mrs. Walker, who is physically disabled on the right side of her body, was able to walk for short periods of time.

After the tour

On the way back from their tour, Walsh and the Walkers caught their wheels in ruts and broken areas along the sidewalk. Their wheels spun as they scrambled out of gravel at intersections. They struggled in and out of swinging doors at businesses along the way. Even buildings designed with ramps to service the handicapped had other obstacles, such as two-inch-high thresholds.

Walsh attempted to make a bank deposit at the drive-in window of American Savings and Loan because there were no ramps on which he could get into the building. As he waited in line, a Great Dane in the Datsun truck ahead of him started barking wildly.

Walsh changed his mind.

Band-aids and Handi-wipes

Band-aids and Handi-wipes awaited individuals coming back with blisters and hands dirty from driving wheelchairs. "No accidents, no blisters," said Senator Dean. "We left our calling cards and told Vocational Rehabilitation to re-do their building."

Carla Gourdin, a BYU coed confined to a wheelchair since a trampoline accident, led the senator and the commissioners on their tour. Miss Gourdin was 1977 Miss Wheelchair Utah and was fourth runner-up in the national competition.

"They were so funny," she said. "They stopped in the Rehabilitation Center and dictated a letter to the Chamber of Commerce, and stopped by an attorney's office and let the lawyers take a ride in the wheelchairs."

Many felt enlightened from the experience. "It was very informative," Mayor Ferguson said. "I can see many improvements that are needed. We've already got dollars earmarked for sidewalks. Improvement of these barriers will have highest priority."

Also participating in the event was Eron Grisham, director of Student Special Services at BYU and a member of the Handicap Awareness board. He said a survey is currently being made of the campus by each college to evaluate the physical access to buildings and other campus facilities.

Miss Brown said the survey results will be compiled and delivered to the city engineers, but right now the only major change would be to resurface the streets.

"If they smooth out the streets, there will be no need to re-cut the sidewalk curbs," she said.

'Wheels for Easter Seals' brings $11,601 in pledges Brinkman sets new record

Curt Brinkman's 275-mile wheelchair journey collected $11,601 in pledges for the Easter Seals Society — setting a new world's record.

"We expect to reach $12,000," Joanna Buck, society office manager, said Monday. The money will help handicapped children in Utah.

The record Brinkman set was for the most miles traveled in a wheelchair in the least amount of time. He left from Cedar City May 15 and arrived in Salt Lake City Friday.

During the first half of his journey, Brinkman encountered a hailstorm, a sandstorm, stinkbugs and rattlesnakes. The last half was even busier.

"From Eureka to Provo it was all uphill," he said. "But the weather was better, and all the schools in the area came out to cheer me on. A lot of people stopped along the road and promised to make pledges."

On Friday, Brinkman had a police escort from Provo to Salt Lake City. "One patrolman would come from one town and follow me until I reached another town," he said. "They're calling each other to say I was going."

In spite of the public response, cause, Brinkman felt disappointed he traveled the last eight miles of his trip on a rainy day in Salt Lake Saturday morning. "It was a lot better than I expected," he said. "They had a nice ceremony with a band, and the people all around."

Brinkman feels his "Wheels for Easter Seals" was definitely worth the effort. "I wouldn't do it again, said, 'but I'm glad I did it. I will trade it in for anything.'"

People who wish to contribute to Easter Seals may call in their pledges at 262-6459, or write to Easter Seals, 4868 South State St., Murray, Utah 84107.

Impressed by Brinkman Y student collects $13,601

Impressed by Curt Brinkman's wheelchair trek this past week, BYU student Theresa Luck raised $13,601 to help Easter Seals.

Mrs. Luck, an art education major from Albany, Ga., said, "When I read the story about Curt Brinkman in The Universe Thursday, I felt embarrassed that he was receiving so little support. My visiting teaching lesson for that day was on charity, and I told the girl I was visiting of my plans to help Curt, and she donated the first dollar."

Mrs. Luck said she was "surprised and excited" about the response she received in her collecting efforts.

"Many people said they had intended to donate to the cause, but never got around to it," Mrs. Luck said. "When I came to their door, they decided to go ahead and let me take their donations."

Mrs. Luck visited residents in the Americana I and IV and Centennial apartments. She said the people who donated were friendly and willing to help in Curt's effort to raise money for Easter Seals. She collected a total of $13,601 in four hours.

Mrs. Luck later called the Easter Seals office and told them of the amount collected. She also said students in her class pledged to money to donate so the total should exceed $15,000.

Mrs. Luck said that Easter leaders hope that any who still wish to donate, will do so. They can call 645-9. Pledges can also be sent to Easter Seals, 4868 South State St., Murray, Utah 84107.

Reclamation head tours CUP

The head of the Bureau of Reclamation received a birds-eye view of the Utah Valley Water Purification Plant in Orem during a construction tour Friday of the Central Utah Project.

R. Keith Higginson, Bureau of Reclamation commissioner, toured the purification plant along with project manager John Jensen, and Robert Hilbert, chairman of the Central Utah Water Conservancy District board of directors.

The purpose of Higginson's visit was to "get better acquainted with the Bonneville Unit of the CUP."

Funding for the project has been of recent concern to many residents, however, Higginson said he thought the money allotted recently by Congress was "not a fight for funds, but there are certain restrictions."

Concerning future funding he said, "We will have to see what the total budget looks like."

The project will continue to be funded for another year as Congress recently approved $55 million for the coming fiscal year. This figure is about $15.5 million above the Carter administration's recommendation.

The group then flew over other units of the CUP on their way to Montrose, Colo., for a ground-breaking ceremony for the Dallas Creek Project.

Students learn to crawl, run

Hanging onto a rope and jumping off a cliff, swimming fully clothed and firing M-16 rifles are activities offered at BYU.

One can get credit for these activities, as well as snowshoeing, flag football and simulated wars. The class is called "leadership lab," and it's offered by the military science department.

"You can't go to all these leadership labs where you have to lead, and not learn," said Joseph Farnsworth, a pre-dental sophomore from Beaver, Utah, majoring in microbiology.

Maj. Daniel P. Aldridge, assistant professor of military science, believes proper leadership training is the "basis for success."

Andrews, 48, runs the two miles in an average time of 12:10, Aldridge said.

Sit-ups and a two-mile run are part of the Army physical fitness test given every Thursday. Other events include the horizontal ladder, a 20-yard "crab crawl" and an obstacle course known as "run, dodge and jump." The crab crawl is an exercise where the students crawl almost on their backs like a crab.

Cadets are given minimum standards to meet, but the ultimate goal is to "max" the test with a score of 100 on each of the five events.

Passing the test

"There's nothing to him! A puff of wind will blow him away," a light-weight cadet is kidded as he glides along the horizontal bars.

"So that's what you big guys say about us little guys. We have less to work with," a skinny friend offers from below.

Traversing 84 bars in one minute will gain a cadet 100 points on the horizontal ladder.

Sixty of 100 points is required on each event to pass the test. On the ladder, 54 would be the minimum.

Maximum on the two-mile run is 14:15; the crab crawl, 14 seconds; the obstacle course, 19.5 seconds; and the sit-ups, 54 seconds, Aldridge said.

While only four of 1,200 summer camp cadets received maximum scores on the entire test last year, Aldridge said, most cadets are able to run the two-mile course in 14 minutes.

Military tactics

At the end of each term or semester, the cadets engage in a four-mile endurance run along the Provo foothills. Times range from 25 to 40 minutes, Aldridge said.

The lab, conducted every Tuesday and Thursday at 7 a.m. east of the Stadium, begins with 20 minutes of calisthenics.

When not taking the physical fitness test, the students participate in team sports or military tactics.

"The lieutenant ends up doing all the thinking for his platoon of 40 people," Aldridge said as he watched a cadet lead his peers through a drill.

The idea of the program is not necessarily to build character, but to build leadership abilities, he said.

'Mormon Players' work 12-hour day to perfect art

By BETH WOODBURY
Universe Staff Writer

It's 10 p.m. The campus is dark and deserted, and the halls of the HFAC are empty. But down in B-201 the lights are still burning, and a few students are singing, reading scripts, and practicing lines. They have been rehearsing for 12 hours.

These students are members of the "Mormon Players," a newly formed musical repertory company at BYU. They have given up job opportunities and summer fun and dedicated their time to the production of three musicals, "Bye Bye Birdie," "Kiss Me Kate" and "Where's Charley."

Pilot program

Dr. Charles Metten, drama department chairman, says the Mormon Players are basically an experimental group, a "pilot" for a new program.

"The idea grew out of the department's need to give professional training to candidates for the Master of Fine Arts degree," he explains. "Hopefully, the Mormon Players will eventually become a professional resident acting company. They'll rehearse spring and summer, perform at BYU in the fall, and go on tour winter semester."

"But first," he adds, "we have to prove to the Board of Trustees, who will be our producers, that we are capable of doing it."

Auditions for the Players took place in February. Metten, directors Charles Whitman and Preston Gledhill, and designers Janet Swenson and Eric Fielding selected the 25 company members from approximately 300 students.

Rehearsals began the day of graduation and will continue until "Where's Charley" opens June 15. The shows will close during Education Week in August, with two being performed each evening.

Metten is optimistic about the future of the Players. "The students already show a great deal of unity and support," he says. "They're happy, disciplined, and have a tremendous sense of commitment."

Typical day

A day of rehearsals shows how committed these students really are. At 8 a.m. Friday, music director Jason Dunn and choreographer Pat Debenham are already in B-201, discussing a dance number from "Bye Bye Birdie." Dunn, a graduate student working toward his MFA, is directing the music for all three shows.

Universe photos by Denise Wadsworth
Director Max Golightly explains from the script how he wants a character portrayed.

"Doing three shows at once is maddening," he says. "Fortunately, they're all different musically. 'Bye Bye Birdie' places little demand on the chorus, while 'Where's Charley' has intricate, lush choral parts. 'Kiss Me Kate' has a lot of Latin rhythms, and its emphasis is on dance."

A few actors and actresses arrive, followed by Dr. Charles Whitman, the director of the show. After an opening prayer, the group divides. Two students stay in B-201 to rehearse a dance with Debenham, and the rest go to the Nelsie Theatre with Whitman.

After a run-through of "What Did I See in Him," Whitman starts blocking "Lot of Livin'." "This will be choreographed, but let's improvise two or three times," he tells the performers. "Do whatever you want to."

A moment later he stops them and asks, "Who are you? Each of you has a character. React to the situation. Be daring to do anything. Now's the time to have fun."

Susan Alexander, a sophomore from Sacramento, Calif., says this is typical of Whitman. "He knows what he wants, but he's very loose," she explains.

Like most of the other company members, Miss Alexander has a part in each musical. She is playing a small part in "Bye Bye Birdie," the female lead in "Kiss Me Kate," and a character role in "Where's Charley."

In B-201, Debenham is blocking "One Last Kiss." The students laugh and applaud as he shows Dave Nelson how to roll his hips. Nelson, a junior from Santa Paula, Calif., is playing Conrad Birdie, an Elvis Presley-type rock star. He is also playing Kate's father in "Kiss Me Kate" and the butler in "Where's Charley."

At 11:30 a.m. everyone gathers in B-201 and the numbers are run from the top. Promptly at noon, Whitman dismisses the cast. "Thanks a million," he says. "You've worked hard." Everyone seems pleased with the morning's work, and the air is filled with cheerful chatter as they hurry off to lunch.

Set, costume design

Down in the costume shop, the sewing machines are humming busily. The room is crowded with racks of clothes, and Janet Swenson's designs decorate the walls. Like Dunn, she is working on all three shows.

"My challenge is to make the costumes for each show as bright and cheerful as possible without being the same," she says, adding, "The costumes will all be the right period, but I'll jazz them up. For example, in 'Bye Bye Birdie' I'm using the 50s silhouette but not the 50s colors. Otherwise it would be so drab and boring you would die."

The pounding of hammers echoes down the hall. The set is being constructed on the stage of the Pardoe Theater. Out of sheer practicality, designer Eric Fielding must use the same set for all three shows. By adding different scenic units and props to a neutral background, he hopes to give each musical an individual character.

"In 'Bye Bye Birdie' we'll use colored panels to give a 50s quality," he explains. "Kiss Me Kate" will be quite theatrical, with architectural details and historical props. In 'Where's Charley' we'll use period furniture, foliage, drapery, and chandeliers to give a Victorian feeling."

"Kiss Me Kate"

At 1 p.m. the Mormon Players return to B-201 for the "Kiss Me Kate" rehearsal. After prayer and a brief song practice, choreographer Linda Cameron starts to block a scene.

The students are restless and talkative, and she stops in the middle of her counting to say, "You guys aren't with me today. Go back and do it again." The rest of the rehearsal is punctuated by her shouts of "Lis-sen!"

Director Preston Gledhill enters at 2:05 p.m. and watches as Miss Cameron continues working with the cast. At 2:40 he dismisses the chorus and starts rehearsing the leads. He takes the scene slowly, adjusting the actors' positions and correcting their interpretations of the lines. "More enthusiastic," he instructs one actor. "Never small steps for you," he tells another. "You hop, you jump."

The rehearsal ends at 4:55 p.m. with Gledhill's "Good night and thanks a lot."

"Where's Charley"

Rehearsal for "Where's Charley" begins with prayer at 6:05 p.m. Director Max Golightly instructs the players to use a British accent throughout the rehearsal. "Pretend you're Englishers," he says in round English tones.

The cast gathers around the piano to go over their songs, and Golightly sings along with them. At 7:40 p.m. he announces, "The chorus won't be needed tomorrow," and everyone cheers. The chorus leaves with Jason Dunn to practice parts, and the principals start rehearsing a scene.

Tim Eisenhart, supposedly in disguise as Charley's aunt, minces around the room with a long white petticoat tied around his waist. He will be the first BYU student to receive the MFA in acting.

At 8:45 the chorus returns and Golightly tells them to get into place for "The Gossips." "Get in some interesting positions," he says. "Something that looks natural. Where would you be, what would you be doing?"

After running through the number once, he gives them more specific blocking. He interrupts the singing periodically to demonstrate expressions, movements, and reactions.

Finally at 9:50 p.m., the rehearsal is over. Yet they will be back at 8 the next morning, ready for another 12 hours of rehearsal.

Carol Ann King, left, and Tom Barnett rehearse a number from "Where's Charley," which will open June 15 in the Pardoe Theater.

Black fund created

BYU has received a gift of $1,400 to establish the Dr. James Tisdale Memorial Scholarship Fund for black undergraduate students.

Donald T. Nelson, director of the Development Office of the LDS Church said the gift is the contribution of friends and colleagues of Tisdale.

Tisdale and his wife Grace were the first black couple to receive doctorates from the BYU College of Education under the College's Intern Doctorate Program, Nelson said.

Dr. William Lyle, a Los Angeles elementary school principal, said "Our group, including Tisdale, myself and 25 others, was the first group from this area to attend BYU under this intern program."

"After Tisdale passed away a few months ago, we wanted to do something to honor his memory. We felt that this would be a good way to establish a scholarship in his name, and to encourage black youngsters to go into education and to study at BYU."

The scholarship will be awarded to black undergraduate students enrolled in the College of Education. Recipients will be selected by a committee consisting of Grace Tisdale and several representatives from the college.

Dr. Curtis Van Alfen, dean of the college, said he hopes the fund can be increased to provide continual scholarships for deserving students.

'Make world better place,' author says

By KAREN BYBEE
Universe Staff Writer

"You can't put a quart in a pint-size soul," Maurine Whipple said during a lecture in the Alice Louise Reynolds Room of the HBLL Thursday.

Speaking on "A Writers Odyssey," Miss Whipple, who is the author of "The Giant Joshua," told a near-capacity crowd it was up to them to make this world a better place to live in, "since my generation has failed."

Miss Whipple admonished the group to "search for something the world has lost," and to "go out and make your contribution to the world."

"The author said she had no 'pat answers,' but, quoting Abraham Lincoln, said, 'You are the best hope, the youth of the world.'"

"The dream still lives," she said. "It lives in the heart of the common man. You can't kill an idea with bullets, you can only kill an idea with a greater idea."

Miss Whipple started "scribbling" as a young child to relieve her frustrations. At the age of 13 she wrote her first poem, which she jokingly referred to as a "masterpiece." She continued her writing through college to "keep from going crazy."

With the writing of her first book, "Beaver Dam Wash," she was one of the few writers who did not talk about herself, or how badly the world was treated.

Compared with the rest of the world, Utah is divided by a "copper curtain," she said.

"People in the East don't understand us," she explained. "No one ever believed my writing."

Miss Whipple never considered herself to be a writer and was surprised when her work was in demand. Her most successful book, the 1941 "The Giant Joshua," focused on the universal themes inherent in an intensely Mormon subject and setting.

Portraying Mormon life from a woman's point of view for the first time, she drew on the history of St. George and the problems of life and relationships in polygamous families.

She won the prestigious Houghton Mifflin Literary Award for the novel. Miss Whipple said writing "The Giant Joshua" was "tough. No one ever told me how to write a book."

Since publication of "The Giant Joshua," Miss Whipple has written "This is the Place: Utah," and has published numerous articles in Colliers, The Saturday Evening Post, Look, Life, Time, Pageant, and numerous other journals and periodicals.

was taken, and that police had no clues or suspects.

The suspect apparently kept the promise he had made to the employees that he would not let them starve too long in the freezer.

Adamson said the sheriff's office received a phone call minutes after the robbery indicating that the employees were locked in the cooler.

After dumping the trash and entering the back door, one employee turned around and saw a bank bag into a small wastebasket. He then ordered the employees into the large walk-in cooler.

The employees were able to escape by crawling out of the cooler's small hand entrance door.

Orem youth helpful; robbed by travelers

A young Orem resident who planned to help two men became a robbery victim Saturday, according to Orem police.

Allen Anderson, 17, told police he was driving through Orem City Park at 10 p.m. Saturday when he saw a man standing at the side of the road. "He was acting like he wanted me to stop, so I thought maybe they were having car trouble. I've always stopped before to help and have never thought anything about it," he said.

He said the men pulled two guns on him, and stole his truck, dog and wallet.

They emptied Anderson's pockets, told him to walk up the hill and made him lie on the ground in some bushes. "I didn't know what was going on," he said,

"but I was scared. A couple of times I was sure they were going to shoot me."

The two men then left with Anderson's 1974 Chevrolet truck and his dog. Orem police recovered the truck a little over an hour later near 200 N. 400 West in Orem. The two suspects were arraigned Monday in Orem City Court.

However, Anderson's Irish Setter and C.B. radio are still missing. "My dog is still friendly, so she didn't do anything, but go along with them," Anderson said. "I hope she's still alive and will be found soon."

Anderson said he doubts he will be as willing to help strangers in the future. "I've needed help before, so I've always stopped to help. I doubt I will ever stop again. My parents are just glad I'm still alive."
